

Hey guys, this is Srihari!

I am currently pursuing my Bachelor of Engineering in Computer Science at Sri Venkateswara College of Engineering (SVCE). Speaking about my experience, I've interned at a few companies where I got to work on diverse roles:

- Grab Your Seats – A ticketing platform where I contributed as a Product Design Intern. My role involved designing UI/UX based on customer preferences and maintaining the Product Requirements Document (PRD) to ensure smooth development.
- Docsumo – Here, I worked in Business Development and Marketing, focusing on SEO, brand building, and strategic outreach to enhance visibility.
- CloudRho – My last internship was as a Software Development Intern, where I helped build a budgeting application for mid-sized tech firms, integrating invoice processing and utilizing Azure tools for efficient cloud-based financial management.

What are my superpowers?

Now, if I had to define my superpowers, they'd be:

1. Adaptability – I can dive into different roles and pick up new skills quickly, whether it's UI/UX, marketing, or software development.
2. Creative Problem-Solving – I love breaking down complex problems and finding innovative, efficient solutions.
3. Communication & Strategy – Whether it's collaborating with teams, managing clients, or working on SEO strategies, I ensure clarity and impact in everything I do.

My Favorite Movie – Little Miss Sunshine

One movie that has really stuck with me is Little Miss Sunshine.

The story follows a quirky, dysfunctional family that embarks on a road trip to support seven-year-old Olive, an aspiring beauty queen, as she competes in the Little Miss Sunshine pageant.

The family dynamics are what make this film so special:

- Father Richard (Greg Kinnear) – A struggling motivational speaker desperately trying to sell his outdated success program.
- Mother Sheryl (Toni Collette) – The rock of the family, trying to keep everything from falling apart.
- Dwayne (Paul Dano) – A silent, Nietzsche-loving teenager who has taken a vow of silence.

- Uncle Frank (Steve Carell) – A heartbroken, depressed academic recovering from a failed relationship.
- Grandfather (Alan Arkin) – The foul-mouthed but lovable granddad, whose reckless behavior has gotten him kicked out of his retirement home.

At the heart of it all is Olive (Abigail Breslin), a little girl full of dreams and self-doubt, trying to understand what it really means to be beautiful and successful in a world that values perfection.

Through their chaotic yet heartwarming journey, Little Miss Sunshine delivers a powerful message:

👉 Success isn't about winning; it's about embracing who you are.

👉 Flaws, failures, and imperfections make us human.

👉 True beauty lies in authenticity and self-acceptance.

This movie isn't just a comedy; it's a poignant reflection on self-worth, told through humor and raw emotion. It reminds us that sometimes, life's biggest lessons come from the most unexpected places—and people.

So if you haven't seen Little Miss Sunshine yet, I highly recommend it. It's a movie that will make you laugh, think, and maybe even cry—all while reminding you that you're enough just as you are.
